Lyme disease is caused by tick bites and can cause serious long-term symptoms if left untreated. Right now there are no approved vaccines for Lyme disease.

This research study is testing an investigational vaccine to see if it can help prevent Lyme disease in people age 5 and older.

Care Access

Care Access offers patients the opportunity to participate in clinical trials for a variety of conditions and diseases. We are dedicated to improving people's health and wellbeing by bringing clinical research studies to communities nationwide.
